Quintin Williams and Amanda Kropf are wed

Quintin Williams and Amanda Kropf exchanged vows Feb. 7 at a ceremony in Providence, Utah. A reception followed at the Iron Gate Grill. An open house was also held in Riverton to honor the couple.

They will make their home in Logan where Quintin is pursuing a degree in family finance at Utah State. Amanda is taking a break from school and works as a receptionist.

The Williams family would like to thank wonderful family friends, teachers and the community for helping Quintin become a successful young man.

LOCAL MAN HAS SPECIAL VISITOR

The Grim Reaper will do a flyby of the McCabe home in Riverton, March 20, to check out the status of one of his would-be victims, husband and father Darren McCabe, who is turning 40 that day.

Darren's family, friends and co-workers at The Valley Journals send him their condolences and their sincere wishes that the Man in Black will not stay around to play basketball at the local church the following morning where the 40-year-old will likely be hanging out.

groups, scout groups, home owners' associations, and various other types of community groups. He hopes to continue the trend, teaching anyone who is interested in emergency preparedness.

“My main goal in teaching these classes is to pass along information and get people excited about emergency preparedness. I want people to share the passion for being prepared so people are motivated to take action once they have been through the class,” he said.

The class Lewis teaches is available free of charge to any group of residents in South Jordan who are interested in emergency preparedness. “I like to have groups larger than six, and ideally a group of about 20 is perfect,” Lewis said.

Anyone interested in attending a class, or organizing a group and hosting a class may contact Dustin Lewis by calling the city's main phone line.
